Nixon's Move on Calley Rouses Political Debate

8 1971 By JOHN W. FINNEY APR Special to The New York Time

increasingly political debate a result of a letter from Capt. over the court-martial of First Aubrey M. Daniel 3d, the prose-Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. cutor in the Calley courttook a new tack today as Dem-martial, to Mr. Nixon. ocrats and Republicans clashed | Captain Daniel complained in tial aspirations, accused Presi-derer "as a national hero." dent Nixon of playing politics and failing to provide "moral leadership" in the Calley case. becoming intertwined with the

Nixon's intervention in the Cal- announcing he would make the ley case, contending such Presi- final determination on the case dential action was necessary to and in ordering the convicted reassure the public and restore officer freed from the stockade morale in the armed forces.

From the conflicting state-viewed. ments of the two Senators, it was apparent that the Calley case had taken on a new, con- Continued on Page 20, Column 4

WASHINGTON, April 7—The troversial dimension, largely as over whether President Nixon the letter, disclosed yesterday, had improperly intervened in that the President's intervention in the case had weakened Senator Birch Bayh, an In-military justice and enhanced diana Democrat with Presiden-the image of a convicted mur-

The question of Lieutenant Senator Robert Taft Jr., an issue of whether the Presi-Ohio Republican, defended Mr. dent had acted improperly in while his conviction is re-

The White House refused to

Continued From Page I, Col. 7

make any comment today on the Daniel letter, except to say that the President had seen and read it.

Ronald L. Ziegler, White House press secretary, refused to say whether the President intended to answer the letter, which was received last night. He finally explained that he would have no comment on the letter because "the judicial process has not ended yet."

Senator Bayh called a news conference in the Senate Caucus Room to read a five-page statement in which he contended that Mr. Nixon, by "pre-mature" intervention in the case, had made "a truly impar-tial, equitable review impossi-ble."

ble."
"Can there be an objective review when the commander in Chief has made his interest so clearly known to career officers under his command?" the Senator asked in a statement read before a bank of television cameras. sion cameras.

He said it was apparent the He said it was apparent the President had decided to intervene in the case in response to "the great public outcry" against the verdict. The jury found Lieutenant Calley guilty of premeditated murder in killing 22 South Vietnamese civilians at Mylai in 1968 and sentenced him to life imprisonment. "the great public outcry" against the verdict. The jury found Lieutenant Calley guilty of premeditated murder in killing 22 South Vietnamese civilians at Mylai in 1968 and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

The Senator said he had concluded that the President was "determined to play politics with the Calley decision and the entire Mylai tragedy." In support of this contention, the Senator noted that 115 American servicemen have been tried for premeditated murder of Vietnamese civilians, with 59 convicted of murder and 21 of sailor or marine in confine, "ment."

By involving himself in the calley to treview process in the Calley to senator Bayh said, the President "has failed to meet his responsibility" to provide "moral leadership" and has "undermined" the integrity of the military legal system.

Senator Bayh said the President's announcement of review dent's action could affect the welfare of American servicemen taken as prisoners of war. He asked:

"If the President, by his arbitate?"

In defense of the President, Senator Taft, at a crowded tively small Senate office, read news conference in his relative statement that he said he had discussed" with an undentified White House aide.

Senator Taft, at a crowded tively small Senate office, read news conference in his relative statement that he said he had discussed" with an undentified White House aide.

Senator Taft said the President's announcement of review dent's action could affect the welfare of American servicement taken as prisoners of war. He asked:

"If the President has failed to meet his responsibility" to provide the integrity of the military legal system.

Senator Bayh said, the news conference in his relative statement that he said he had discussed" with an undentified White House aide.

Senator Taft, at a crowded tively small Senate office, read news conference in his relative statement that he said he had discussed" with an undentified White House and statement that he said he had discussed with an undentified White House at the his responsibi

United Press International

Senator Birch Bayh, left, Indiana Democrat, attacked President Nixon's action in Calley case, while Senator Robert Taft Jr., Ohio Republican, defended intervention. They are shown at separate news conferences yesterday.

cases, he said, has the President "made known his intention to involve himself in the appeal process for a single soldier, sailor or marine in confine-ment."

captive civilians or prisoners of war should be exonerated, what is to prevent American prisoners or civilians, now or at some future time, from suffering a similar fate?"

In defense of the President lesser offenses. In none of these captive civilians or prisoners of to the President for final re-view. Lieutenant Calley's case thus would not automatically be reviewed by the President.

The cases of officers whose sentences include dismissal from the service such as Lieutenant Calley go automatically to the Secretary of their branch of the service for final review.

Asked why he thought it appropriate for the President to make such an announcement before the military process was completed, Senator Taft said that in view of "widespread public misunderstanding of the verdict," it was necessary that the President reassure the public there would be "the most thorough review."

Futhermore he said as Com-

Futhermore, he said, as Commander in Chief the President had a responsibility to take into consideration the morale of the armed forces. The outdry following the verdict, he said, might have led those in the military "to feel there had been some miscarriage of justice."

or justice."

"The controversial guerrilla nature of the war and the extent of our participation in it aggravate the difficulty of applying standards of justice to plying standards of justice to inkvidual conduct," Senator Taft said. "That this needs pub-lic explanation and understand-ing is plying in the standlic explanation and understanding is obvious from the outcry following the jury verdict.

Senator Taft accused Captain Daniel of making an 'all-considered and emotional attack" upon the President. What the captain failed to understand, the enator said, is that the President has made clear he would not take a position one way or the other on the case.

Attorney General John Mitchell, meanwhile, raised the question whether "the normal aspects of the criminal justice" system, with respect to a designated crime, should apply in the circumstances of Mylai."

Appearing this evening on the David Frost television show, Mr. Mitchell said he had "a great deal of concern about the total picture" of the Calley case His concern, he explained, was "whether or not, in a circumstance like that, an individual or a number of individuals can be taken out of the context of the total operation and have the military code of institutions."

military code of justice applied to it."

Senator Edmund S. Muskie, Democrat of Maine, said he had talked by telephone today with Captain Daniel at Fort Benning, Ga., and "assured him of my concern that our country's fundamental dedication to the indamental dedication to the integrity of the legal process—military and civilian—be military and civilian — be maintained."

"With avenues of appeal still open to Lieutenant Calley," Senator Muskie said, "I feel I cannot comment further on his case because of the risk of compromising that integrity itself."

Senator George S. McGovern. Democrat of South Dakota, said that while the President had the right of final review, Mr. Nixon "should not have made it appear that he would exercise that right as a result of it appear that he would exercise that right as a result of the public clamor."

Senator Harold E. Hughes, Democrat of Iowa, sent a three-page letter to the President calling upon him to "clarify" his actions "by placing them in the context of military justice in wartime."

Mr. McGovern is an announced candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Mr. Muskie is regarded as a certain candidate and Mr. Hughes as a potential contender.