Order Imbalance Causes 8 Stocks Not to Trade

The record turnover on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday kept brokers, specialists and exchange officials busy in an attempt to maintain an orderly market.

Shortly after noon, there were more than 100 common or capital issues that had not traded and were listed officially as "delayed." The exchange terms an issue "delayed" when it is not readily possible to match buy and sell orders.

At the close, there were only eight issues that did not trade during the day because of an imbalance of orders.

These were American Motors, General Motors, Ford Motor, Burlington Industries, Cincinnati Milacron, Giddings & Lewis, Ingersoll-Rand and U. S. Leasing International.
