Nader Calls on Congress to Reassert Its Authority

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30

—Ralph Nader, the consumer activist, urged Congress today to reassert its constitutional powers and thus prevent President Nixon from developing "a do-it-yourself Congress right inside the White House complex."

But Mr. Nader took sharp issue, in testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on Sepa-ration of Powers, with a bill designed to force the President designed to force the President to spend money as Congress directs.

"In my opinion, the bill falls far short of what is necessary," he said of the measure sponsored by Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, and supported by a majority of the Senate.

The measure would require

The measure would require the President to notify Congress when he impounds, or refuses to release, appropriated funds and to spend the money unless Congress consonts. ey unless Congress consents within 60 days to the withholding of it.

According to Mr. Nader, the

According to Mr. Nader, the proposal implies that the President has a right to impound funds—a right that neither Mr. Nader nor the sponsors are prepared to concede—and leaves open the possibility that the Administration could hold up funds indefinitely by merely repeating the 60 day cycle. repeating the 60-day cycle.

repeating the 60-day cycle.

Bi llions Held Up

Mr. Nixon has refused to release several billions of dollars for highway construction, sewage treatment, oil conservage treatment, oil conservage treatment, oil conservation, rural electrification and other programs enacted by Congress, prompting professions of outrage on Capital Hill.

The budget conflict took a new turn today when it was learned that Caspar W. Weinberger, Mr. Nixon's nominee to be Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, had told department officials that he could not approve their testimony before Congress, prompting professions of outrage on Capital Hill.

The budget conflict took a new turn today when it was learned that Caspar W. Weinberger, Mr. Nixon's nominee to be Secretary of Health, Education outside the knowledge or control of Congress."

Mr. Nixon had "seized" Congressional authority "by means of impoundment, unilateral budget cuts and fiscal manipulations outside the knowledge or control of Congress."

Mr. Nixon had "seized" Congressional authority "by means of impoundment, unilateral budget cuts and fiscal manipulations outside the knowledge or control of Congress."

Mr. Nixon had "seized" Congressional authority "by means of impoundment, unilateral budget cuts and fiscal manipulations outside the knowledge or control of Congress."

Mr. Nixon had "seized" Congressional authority "by means of impoundment, unilateral budget cuts and fiscal manipulations outside the knowledge or control of Congress."

Mr. Nixon had "seized" Congressional authority "by means learned that Caspar W. Weinberger had told deaction and told deaction official who vised the impoundment of the gressional consent, make war, disputed

Without Approval

Mr. Weinberger said the department officials could not testify because of "the problem of how do you form policy and how do you clear things when there's no one with official standing as Secretary to approve the policy."

Consequently, Mr. Weinberge and two education officials have declined invitations to testify next week before a House Education and Labor Subcommittee.

Dr. John Sapp, a health policy planner in the department, canceled a scheduled appearance tomorrow before a Senate Labor and Public Welfare subcommittee.

The Senate Development of the real suggested that the real cause of Congressional umrest over lost powers was that Mr. Nixon had not consulted often enough "at White House breakfast tables" with Senate and House leaders.

Senator Ervin's bill won endorsements from a number of other witnesses, most of them Senators, but Mr. Nader urged that it be replaced by a bill to prohibit flatly the withholding of appropriations unless Congress consented to a Presidential request to reduce or eliminate the funding. mittee.

The Senate Democratic Policy Associated Press
Ralph Nader at Senate subcommittee hearing.

The budget conflict took a ew turn today when it was arried that Caspar W. Wein-lof impoundment, unilateral supper-dent could, without any Conappropriations and enter into treaties with other drafted the controversial new governments by calling them budget proposal.

budget proposal.

His confirmation to the Cabinet post is being blocked by members of the Senate Labor nd Public Welfare Committee until they receive a full acounting of the amounts being withheld and the reasons for the actions.

Without Approval

Mr. Weinberger said the department officials could not testify because of "the problem of how do you clear things when had not consulted often enough "at White House had be parted by the consulted of the problem of how do you clear things when there's no one with official and House leaders."

"executive agreements," transfer Cabinet authority to White House aides immune from Congressional inquiry, and fundamentally reorganize the Government.

Mr. Nader said the Congressional response must be more than a polite "palliative" and suggested that the real cause of Congressional unrest over lost powers was that Mr. Nixon had not consulted often enough "at White House breakfast tables" with Senate and House leaders.

Over Spending

suggestion plauded by Senator Jacob K. Republican of New Javits, York, who suggested that he might offer something similar to the Senate before it acts.

Mr. Nader and another witness, Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, Democrat of Minnesota, worried aloud that the White House seemed to have the upper hand in the constitutional dispute because of the complexity of the subject.

complexity of the subject.

Mr. Humphrey appeared to have found a way to dramatize his viewpoint, however. As the television cameras focused, he held up five documents comprising the 1974 budget request from the White House and complained that the President made them sound, to the public, like "Holy Writ."

He complained of secrecy surrounding preparation of the budget request and said that, by comparison, the Pentagon papers "are as open as the Sears Roebuck catalogue."