The Gulf of Tonkin gave
Congressional support to "all necessary steps" taken by the President to "repel any armed attack against forces of the United States and to prevent further aggression" in Southeast Asia. The resolution was adopted after two United States destroyers were reported attacked by North Vietnamese torpedo boats.

Republicans, who had seized the initiative in proposing the repeal amendment last month, twitted the Democratic leadership today for putting the Senate through the legislative exercise of voting twice to repeal the resolution.

Describing the exercise as "a duplication of effort and a waste of time," Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Senate Republican, leader, suggested that "the only reason resolution would leave the repeal of the Tonkin resolution would leave the resident roops.

The Administration has taken a neutral attitude on repeal of the resolution, leaving the declusively upon his powers as clusively upon his powers as clusively upon his powers as clusively upon his powers as commander in Chief.
