

Notes on People

Salinger in McGovern's Camp

Senator George McGovern's newest recruit in his fast-growing campaign to win the Democratic Presidential nomination is Pierre Salinger, who will join the McGovern camp this week.

Mr. Salinger, who served as President Kennedy's press secretary and was active in Robert F. Kennedy's Senatorial campaign, said he was convinced that Mr. McGovern is a far stronger candidate than polls indicate.

"He's best in a confrontation situation," he said in New York. "Remember him in the debate before the California caucus at the 1968 convention, when he absolutely demolished Hubert and Gene?"

Mr. Salinger indicated that by joining the McGovern organization, he won't be jeopardizing his reputation as a Kennedy family standby. He believes, he said, that Senator Edward M. Kennedy is sincere in declaring he is not a candidate.

The exact nature of Mr. Salinger's role in the McGovern campaign will be determined this week in Washington, Mr. Salinger said.

Georgia legislator and civil rights advocate Julian Bond has honorary degrees aplenty—eight, to be exact, and he's due to pick up two more soon. But today he'll receive a degree that really counts—his own earned bachelor's degree in English. Mr. Bond dropped out of Morehouse College in Atlanta nearly 11 years ago, in his senior year, to devote full time to the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. Recently he completed all requirements for a degree by writing a term paper titled "The Crisis in Education," and now, at age 31, he becomes a college graduate.

President Nixon sounded like a wistful, filled-with-mixed-emotions father of the bride. "We will miss having Tricia around," he said in an interview in the current Look magazine. "We have a small family and, because of what we've been through together, a rather close family." Asked about his hopes for his 25-year-old elder daughter, who will be married to Edward Finch Cox in the White House Rose Garden on June 12, Mr. Nixon said:

"For her and her husband to live their own lives, to make it on their own and to develop individual careers.

Look Magazine/Howell Conant via U.P.I.

President Nixon with his elder daughter, Tricia, who is to be married to Edward Finch Cox a week from Saturday.

To be out of the glare of merciless publicity. Tricia is independent and wants to be appreciated for what she is, not for what her father and mother are."

The management refused to let the show go on in Toulon France, after learning the folksinger Joan Baez tended to include on the state network France Mi-