

Tricia Has Quieted Down Some

Fourteen years, as fathers know, make a considerable difference in daughters. In 1957 Tricia Nixon was a rather tomboyish 11-year-old, yelling uninhibitedly as she attended a Washington Senators game with her father, then the vice president. Now Tricia is poised and ladylike at 25, and it's difficult to imagine the woman in her engagement portrait (at right) screaming at umpires. These days she attends such events with Edward Cox, who'll become her husband Saturday.
