

Julie Answers Questions on British TV

Julie Nixon Eisenhower, joined by her husband, David, carried her role as her family's main public spokesman to England last night.

In a session on British television she answered questions from viewers ranging from why Mr. Nixon did not lay the full Watergate case before the public to how the affair has affected her own social life.

Asked whether she wished her father had carried out his 1962 vow to retire from politics she answered: "I can't wish that when I've seen my father end the war in Vietnam."
