Nixon Adds His Name

President Nixon sat at a desk in an open field yesterday to sign the guest book at the Khatyn Memorial where the village of Khatyn once stood. The village, near Minsk, was destroyed by the Germans in World War II.

In Minsk, during yesterday's 30th anniversary of the liberation of that city, he laid a wreath at an obelisk commemorating the Russian victory. As part of the ceremony, he told a luncheon meeting that his talks with Leonid Brezhnev were dedicated to making sure that the two strongest nations in the world not waste their young men in war."
