

Two for Tee

NIXON AT SAN CLEMENTE

THERE WERE two former Presidents golfing in California last weekend.

Richard Nixon took to the course near San Clemente after presumably watching the inaugural festivities in Washington. He played the pleasant Shore Cliffs spread.

In more high-powered golfing company was Gerald Ford, who teamed up with professional golfer Arnold Palmer in the celebrity-studded Bing Crosby National Pro-Am affair at Pebble Beach—and stole the gallery.

He managed at least one birdie (on the 553-yard 14th hole) and obviously enjoyed himself despite his erratic game. No one got a look at Ford's scorecard but Palmer said he was remarkably strong off the tee, but needed a lot of work on his short game.
