KelleyLetsEx-AgentsSeek Funds in Bureau's Offices

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—In a conflict of interest here," one an extraordinary move, Claragent said. "Are members of ence M. Kelley director at the law enforcement agency supposed to chip in to pay for people charged with crimes?"

No agents or high officials tion, has permitted a private organization to solicit in the bureau's 59 field offices funds for the defense of agents accused of burglaries and other illegal acts in connection with investigations of radical groups.

The bureau's internal regula-

The bureau's internal regula-ons have forbidden many kinds of solicitation by private charities or other groups. "You couldn't sell Girl Scout cookies in the field offices," said one veteran observer of the bureau.

Under questioning, a bureau spokesman confirmed that several weeks ago, Mr. Kelley permitted the F.B.I. Association, which includes some 6,600 former agents, to circulate a plea for support for the Special Agents Legal Detense Fund.

ermitted the ion, which include. Former agents, to chargel agent of support for the Sp. Agents Legal Detense Fund.

Letter to Field Office

The letter, addressed to the special agent in charge of each field office, urged that the please made known to line agents. It is ton senting glary investing said in an intermoney to other accused of burglaries or other carrying out orders in the investigations of domestic radical groups.

Mr. Kelley accompanied the cociation's letter with a note office stressing that the sociation's letter with a note office stressing that the said that the legal assistance would be available only to agents charged or investigated out as part of their duties and would not be given to agents or officials caught up in recent charges or malfeasance and corruption at the bureau.

The association of former agents has never set up a legal afense fund before, Mr. Mor add. Through the associa mer agents keep i ach other ar iobs. It holed the special properties and the special properties and the special properties.

agents' group had been allowed to make the plea had been to avoid a conflict of interest. "We thought it was better for an outside group to do this," he said.

A spokesman for the bureau confirmd that it would make no attempt to audit the collec-tions and would be unable to certify how the money was contributions were to be entirely voluntary.

Several field agents privately criticized the solicitation. "How voluntary is it when the letter is handed to you by the top man in your office?" one of them asked.

He and others also voiced concern over whether there would be any audit to determine how the money was spent and on what types of cases it would be used. "There is also or officials caught up in recent charges or malfeasance and corruption at the bureau.

The association of former agents has never set up a legal defense fund before, Mr. Morgan said. Through the association, former agents keep in touch with each other and sometimes obtain jobs. It holds annual conventions and maintains a small office in New York that is supported by the membership fees.