

..... Although Attorney General [John] Mitchell has ridiculed the far-out view of some in Washington who feel that every room is bugged and that every phone is tapped and that the FBI is tapping the CIA, and the CIA is tapping the FBI, there is testimony that the FBI did tap an official CIA telephone.

..... Robert Amory, Jr., said [story does not say when, where] high officials of the White House showed him evidence that the FBI was tapping his official telephones when he was Deputy Director of Intelligence for the CIA from 1952 through 1962.

Now a Washington lawyer, Amory said he believes the phones were tapped because he favored Red China's admission into the United Nations in the 1950s.

He suggested that the tapping was part of the tugging and hauling between the CIA and FBI at that time.
