Veteran Tells of Spying on Youth Group

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 (AP)

—A former military undercover agent says he spied for nearly six months on a Colored result.

"He word to come to the common trailized. "It depends on the attitude of the common trailized." A former military undercover agent says he spied for nearly six months on a Colorado youth group and its leader because a lieutenant colonel feared they would turn soldiers against the Vietnam war.

The former agent, Oliver A. Pierce, told in an interview of his duties while assigned to voung people in a variety of horizontal process. The same to come to our titude of the commanding officer or, in this case, the G-2," he said.

Other former agents continued this view.

"Each local commander had autonomy. What we collected was established to work with voung people in a variety of recalled one ex-agent who had been stationed in Minneapolis.

ficer] at Fort Carson said he thought Jerry Kvasnicka was more dangerous to G.I.'s at the fort than some of the more militant people because he would get G.I.'s into his youth group and then would indoctrinate them with antiwar beliefs," Mr. Pierce said.

Friend Recalls Pierce

Mr. Kvasnicka.

He said he told his superior "that this shouldn't be done, that there was no justification, but he wanted me to continue there, if only as a listening post."

Defense is Colorado Springs' biggest industry. The city of 124,000 is ringed with militant installation.

Mr. Pierce said he got to know Mr. Kvasnicka and others in the group—the Young Adult Project—as part of his undercover assignment in the last six months of 1969.

Mr. Kvasnicka was not available for comment.

Thomas, now a law student at Georgetown University in Georgetown University Washington, remembers Vietnam war.

The former agent, Oliver A. Pierce, told in an interview of his duties while assigned to Fort Carson, Colo. His statements were the latest in a series of disclosures by former agents concerning the Army's domestic intelligence-gathering activities.

Mr. Pierce, now a civilian living near Boston, said the main object of his surveillance in Colorado Springs was Jerry Kvasnicka.

"The lieutenant colonel who was the G-2 [intelligence officer] at Fort Carson said he thought Jerry Kvasnicka was was defeated as a series of discovery the state of the surveillance in Colorado Springs was Jerry Kvasnicka.

"The lieutenant colonel who was the G-2 [intelligence officer] at Fort Carson said he thought Jerry Kvasnicka was was defeated with the said he told his superior "that there was no justification"

post."
Defense is Colorado Springs' biggest industry. The city of 124,000 is ringed with military installations, including the Air Force Academy, two air bases, the North American Air Defense Command and Fort Carson son

Mr. Salamon and Mr. Thomas cover assignment in the last six months of 1969.

Mr. Kvasnicka was not available for comment.

Mr. Kvasnicka's friends, John Thomas now a law student at

Local Autonomy

But the town's dissenters ap-Pierce.

"I first met him at a Presbyterian church meeting," Mr. Thomas said. "I knew he was a clerk shuffling papers."

Steve Salamon, who was on Sut the town's dissenters apparently were closely watched. Mr. Pierce said the Army had two competing military intelligence units at Colorado Springs. His unit operated out of Fort Carson, the other out of downtown Colorado Springs, he said. The Army's method of de-recalled one ex-agent who had been stationed in Minneapolis.

Another former agent who worked in the Washington area said there often was a rigid military determination to adhere to the letter of an order. "We might be asked for the names of the 10 most active radical groups in an area. If there were only four active groups, we'd have to come up with the names of six others," said this ex-agent, who would not be identified.

"When a request came for information, we would just amass

"When a request came for information, we would just amass a file and send it along and let somebody else decide what it was for," said another former agent, who also declined use of his name. "When we were told to check out draft resistance groups, we didn't make any distinction whether they engaged in legal or extralegal engaged in legal or extralegal activity."