

PEOPLE WILL TALK ABOUT...

...OUR JANUARY ISSUE:

AN ASSASSIN'S DIARY: On the dark side of the American Dream lies the lethal impotence of have-nots like Arthur Bremer, who sought the terrible fulfillment of assassination. Bremer's diary, here published at length for the first time, reveals the grandiose delusions of the nobody who tried to kill Richard Nixon but instead shot George Wallace—and thereby assured the President's reelection. The Pentagon Papers may have raised all the solemn questions of war, peace, diplomacy, and freedom of the press, but the eerie pages of a dishwasher's almost illegible scrawl may have had more to do with shaping America's future.

ALSO: Henry Fairlie's disturbing reappraisal of the heroics and illusions of the Kennedy years; how white performers have ripped off black music; a sobering look at the pros and cons of breeder reactors; a delightful report on a pioneering school where busy hands are at work on good dreams. Plus: A new Harper's feature: "Rediscovering Your Body." And lots more!

...OUR COMING EVENTS:

- Five myths about your IQ.
- The real Bunkers: a sensitive portrait of a Middle American family.
- The use and misuse of grand juries to muzzle political dissent.
- What the Supreme Court is going to do about obscenity.
- New fiction by Bernard Malamud and William Saroyan.
