Nixon-Haldeman-Ehrlichman. From Evans and Novak column: "Trying to chart [Nixon's] strategy for surviving Watergate, his advisers are confronting this tormenting dilemma: how can he disengage from [Haldeman and Ehrlichman] without dangerously antagonizing them. .... Dean ... has said privately that the two former chief lieutenants would turn on the President if he repudiated them. That view is shared by several former White House aides who believe that fear alone would stop the President from accusing Haldeman and Ehrlichman of wrongdoing."
