The Major Events of the Day

International

Several hours of fighting among units of the Uganda Army ended yesterday morning, leaving the East African country's controversial President, Gen. Idi Amin, still in power. It was not clear whether rebellious soldiers had attempted a coup d'état to overthrow the Amin regime or whether Amin loyalists had begun a massacre of a suspected tribal group in the army and had met resistance. There will probably be severe reprisals. [1:6-7.]

Secretary of State Kissinger arrived in Moscow for delicate and difficult talks with the Soviet leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev. The purpose of the current talks is to break the crucial deadlock in negotiations on limitation of strategic arms. During his three-day visit, Mr. Kissinger told newsmen, "We will make concrete progress on a number of outstanding issues." He said that another topic would be the exact dates of President Nixon's visit to Moscow, which is expected to take place late in June. [1:1.]

National

Senator Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, the ranking Republican on the Senate Watergate Committee, urged President Nixon to turn over all "relevant" tape recordings and documents to the House Judiciary Committee, which is deliberating the President's possible impeachment. He said in an interview on the "Face the Nation" television program that the committee ought to honor "whatever reasonable request the President makes, such as the presence of counsel in the principal deliberations and investigation of the committee." [1:8.]

The cost of college education will rise again next fall, making it 9.4 per cent more expensive than this year and 35.8 per cent more than it was four years ago. The College Entrance Examination Board reported that in the coming academic year a student living on campus at an average four-year private college would have to pay $4,039, which is $346 more than this year. [1:2-3.]

In treating certain forms of schizophrenia it has been found that affectionate dogs have been used successfully where human therapists have failed. It has also been discovered that a dog can establish an effective parent-child relationship with a young monkey who had previously formed such an attachment to its own mother. This is con-
