The Major Events of the Day

International

President Nixon announced that President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt would make a state visit to the United States before the end of the year, the latest of several signs that the two leaders have developed a close relationship during Mr. Nixon's triumphant visit to Egypt. Yesterday the two men were again acclaimed by hundreds of thousands of cheering Egyptians as they journeyed by train from Cairo to Alexandria. [1:1.]

Four Arab terrorists attacked a kibbutz in northern Israel and killed three women before being killed during a gun fight with members of the kibbutz. The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command promptly issued a statement claiming responsibility for the abortive raid and calling it a response to President Nixon's Middle East trip. [1:2.]

Three Lebanese villages on the eastern slopes of Mount Hermon were shelled by Israeli artillery and Lebanon returned the fire, according to a military communiqué in Beirut, which said an Israeli military unit had been intercepted in the same area and forced to fall back. [1:3.]

Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, delivered his maiden speech from the floor of the House of Lords, the first such address made by a member of the royal family in 90 years. His plea for more government support of recreation seemed less significant than his appearance, which served to focus attention on the 25-year-old Prince of Wales. In the gallery as the Prince's guest was 20-year-old Laura Jo Watkins, an American. [1:1-3.]

The 20 nations negotiating world monetary reform agreed to a series of "interim" arrangements pending an eventual return to more stable currency exchange rates. The arrangements are designed to promote financial harmony and to help the less-developed countries. [1:7.]

National

Highly reliable sources said that Secretary of State Kissinger was not "a target" of the Watergate prosecutor's investigation of the Nixon Administration's secret wiretapping program. And one source said that the prosecutor's office had told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that it had no indication of any criminal liability on the part of Mr. Kissinger. [1:8.]
