The Major Events of the Day

International

At the end of a two-day conference in Lisbon, Secretary General Waldheim announced that Portugal was ready to recognize the territory of Portuguese Guinea as an independent state and to support its entry into the United Nations. Thus ended Portugal's long estrangement from the United Nations. Mozambique and Angola are expected to follow. Portuguese Guinea into independence from Portugal and representation in the United Nations. [1:8.]

Turkish troops arrested the able-bodied men and expelled the women and children from the last Greek Cypriote havens in the Turkish-occupied area of northern Cyprus. Before leaving for Athens to consult with the Greek Government, Glafkos Clerides, President of the Greek Cypriote administration, sent a message to Secretary General Waldheim and members of the United Nations Security Council complaining that 20,000 Greek Cypriotes had been expelled from the Turkish sector between Nicosia, the capital, and Kyrenia, the coastal city 12 miles to the north. President Nixon summoned his principal defense lawyer, James D. St. Clair, other aides and speech writers to Camp David, indicating that some new move was contemplated in the Congressional impeachment drive. [1:1.]

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon suggested that the Nixon Administration would continue its present economic policy of budget and monetary restraint even if unemployment level, now at 5.3 per cent, went above 6 per cent—the rate that in the past has been considered recessionary. Mr. Simon and Kenneth Rush, the President's counselor for economic policy, in separate television appearances, each rejected forecasts that the rate would go over 6 per cent in the coming months. [1:6.]

Herbert W. Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal lawyer, has told the House Judiciary Committee that John D. Ehrlichman was trying to leak a story that the Democratic party chairman, Lawrence F. O'Brien, was in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service weeks after Mr. Ehrlichman knew that the IRS had found no

Steve Grillo, 31 years old, believed to be a member of the Joey Gallo Mafia group, was shot and killed while attending a fundraising "Las Vegas Nite" at the synagogue of the Congregation B'nai Israel at Ocean and Jerome Avenues in Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn. His death may have been connected with a struggle for control of the Gallo group. Since July 1, one other member of the group has been killed and three others have been wounded. [1:2-3.]

Officials of Bloomfield College in Bloomfield, N. J., are expected to file a bankruptcy petition in Newark today. Dr. Merle Allshouse, the college's president, was said to have told a faculty meeting last week about the bankruptcy proceeding, which, he said, was due to the college's poor financial situation and a recent court order to reinstate 13 faculty members who were dismissed last year to cut costs. The American Association of University Professors reportedly will oppose the bankruptcy petition as "unnecessary" and on the ground that it was "merely an effort to subvert the court's decision." [2:7-8.]

Following on Appellate Division ruling last spring that nudity could not be considered lewd, nude bathers are appearing in increasing numbers at the big public beaches—Brighton Beach in Brooklyn, Jones Beach in Nassau County and Fire Island in Suffolk County. The number of nude bathers is minuscule compared with people who wear bathing apparel, but the Long Island State Park police have issued 40 summonses so far this summer, compared to a few at this time last year.
