NYTimes The Major Events of the Day AUG 16 1974

International

Premier Constantine Karamanlis of Greece told his country that the Government would not go to war over Cyprus. He said that Greece could not land troops on the island because it was too far away, and that Turkey already had an overwhelming military advantage. An invasion, the Premier said, could not be attempted without the risk of weakening the defense of Greece. [1:8.]

The Turkish forces moved east and west across northern Cyprus in an attempt to cut the island in two. In the east, armored columns entered the port city of Famagusta, and in the west other forces appeared headed toward Morphou Bay. Greek Cypriotes could not match the Turkish military force and as their resistance dwindled, thousands of Greek Cypriote civilians fled their overrun villages and towns to the safety of the south. [1:6-7.]

The United States has informed Greece, Turkey and Cyprus of its willingness to take an active mediating role in ending the Cyprus crisis and asked for suggestions on how to resume peace talks. [1:6-7.]

The 48-year-old wife of President Park Chung Hee of Korea died from an assassin's bullet evidently intended for her husband. The attack came as Mr. Park delivered a Liberation Day Speech in the National Theater in Seoul. Mrs. Park had two daughters and a son. The killer was identified as Mun Se Kwang, 22 years old, a Korean who lived in Osaka, Japan. [1:7.]

National

Former President Nixon was subpoenaed to testify in the forthcoming Watergate cover-up trial as a defense witness for John D. Ehrlichman, who had been Mr. Nixon's chief domestic affairs adviser. The effectiveness of the subpoena was uncertain, however, because Mr. Nixon faces possible prosecution on charges in the Watergate case. In response to delay motions by several indicted Watergate defendants, Leon Jaworski, the special Watergate prosecutor, told Federal District Court Judge John J. Sirica that a "reasonable" delay in the cover-up trial was warranted. The trial has been scheduled to start Sept. 9. [1:1.] Members of the American Bar Association at their convention in Honolulu unanimously approved a resolution intended to discour-
