The Major Events of the Day

International
State Department officials said that the United States and East Germany would establish diplomatic relations next Wednesday. The first American Ambassador to East Germany reportedly will be John Sherman Cooper, a former Republican Senator from Kentucky, who has been Ambassador to India. This will leave Canada as the only member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization that has not established diplomatic ties with East Germany. [1:5.]

National
Two subpoenas have been served by a United States marshal on former President Nixon at his estate in San Clemente, Calif. The Justice Department, which announced that the subpoenas were served Wednesday, said they called for Mr. Nixon's testimony as a defense witness at the Watergate cover-up trial scheduled to start Sept. 30 and for his deposition in a civil suit brought by a group of people who were turned away from a 1971 Rally for the Rev. Billy Graham, which Mr. Nixon attended. [1:8.]

Congress was asked by President Ford to appropriate $850,000 for former President Richard M. Nixon to cover the Presidential transition period, his pension and other expenses until June 30. Of the $850,000, $450,000 will be allocated for expenses related to the transition period, which will last six months starting with the day of Mr. Nixon's resignation, Aug. 9. The appropriation would come under the Presidential Act of 1963, which authorizes $900,000 for the transition time between Administrations. Administration officials expect that public expenditures for Mr. Nixon will be substantially higher than the initial $850,000. [1:6-7.]

Roy L. Ash, the budget director, disclosed that President Ford planned to make an initial test next week of Congress's willingness to go along with cuts in the non-defense budget. He said in an interview that Mr. Ford would send to Congress, under the new Congressional Budget Reform Act, about $20-billion in "deferrals" and "revisions" of spending. [1:6-7.]

President Ford will receive recommendations on amnesty for Vietnam war draft evaders and deserters tomorrow morning, a day earlier than he had requested. Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger and

Attorney General William B. Saxbe met to work out details of their joint recommendations. "We'll have a pretty definite plan, we narrowed it down somewhat today," Mr. Saxbe said. [1:1-4.]

Moses Malone, 19 years old, and 6 feet 11 inches tall, became the highest salaried teen-age athlete in the United States. He chose a $3-million, seven-year pro basketball deal in stead of the University of Maryland. In spite of a C average throughout high school, more than 300 colleges offered him a scholarship—about a quarter of all the colleges that field basketball teams. [1:5-7.]

Metropolitan
District Attorney Richard H. Kuh said that there was "not a scintilla of evidence" that anyone had sneaked securities out of, and back into, the City Controller's much-investigated vault. He announced that an inquiry into discrepancies in the vault had ruled out any criminality. [1:1.]

New York City has been compelled to send 150 seriously retarded and disturbed children from Manhattan to expensive institutions outside the state because he State Department of Mental Hygiene refuses to take them—and moreover has no place for them if they are from Manhattan. The children have been sent to institutions in 15 states, and the city is paying as much as $100 a day for their care. [1:2-3.]

Starting this fall, the Board of Education will offer instruction in basic subjects in both English and Spanish as part of a major new program agreed to in Federal court. The program to provide bilingual instruction was mandated in response to a class-action suit brought by two related Puerto Rican self-help groups, which had charged that the city schools had failed to meet the needs of Spanish-speaking children. [1:4.]

Lori Paton of Chester, N. J., who as a 15-year-old high-school student became the subject of Federal investigation as the result of a classroom exercise, won her fight to force the Federal Bureau of Investigation to destroy all records pertaining to the case. Judge James A. Coolahan of Federal District Court in Newark ordered the records "removed from custody of the Government and destroyed." At the same time, he denied Miss Paton's claim for $65,000 in damages and refused to grant class relief. [1:2-3.]
