The Major Events of the Day

International

Secretary of State Kissinger has told associates and foreign visitors in recent weeks of his grave concern that failure to solve the world's economic problems—mainly spiraling oil prices—could lead to a break-up of the political fabric of the West, and possible Communist take-overs in some countries. He is expected to express this view Saturday at Camp David when he and Treasury Secretary William E. Simon meet with foreign and finance ministers from Japan, Britain, West Germany and France to discuss the economic crisis. [1:6-7.]

"No one can dictate to us," the Shah of Iran said, rejecting President Ford's call for reduced oil prices. The Shah said that industrial nations should lower the prices of their exports first. He made his remarks at a press club luncheon in Canberra, Australia, where he had been asked for his reaction to Mr. Ford's demand. Oil prices, he said, contributed only 1 per cent to 1.5 per cent to world inflation. [1:5.]

National

White House economic advisers believe that it will take 18 to 36 months to achieve a major reduction in the rate of inflation. They do not believe the country faces a depression and mass unemployment. This was reported by the White House press secretary, Ron Nessen, who had asked several Presidential advisers their opinions preliminary to President Ford's so-called "summit" conference on inflation that will be held in Washington today and tomorrow. [1:8.]

A group of 11 economists from some of the country's universities, including Harvard and Stanford, described the White House economic conference as a "charade," which would "only serve to disguise and avoid the fundamental economic issues confronting the American people." They are members of the "radical school" of economists. They said that they would hold a series of teach-ins to stimulate further public discussion of the country's economic problems. [5:2-3.]

Angela Davis, the black Communist scholar, who was acquitted two years ago of charges of murder and kidnapping, and more than a dozen other witnesses testified for and against Nelson A. Rockefeller's Senate confirmation as Vice President. The issues of abortion and Attica dominated the final day of hearings, which were recessed for an indefinite period. [1:6-7.]

The special Watergate prosecutor, at the request of the White House, is investigating many of President Ford's appointments to high office to insure that the appointees have not been tainted by the Watergate scandal. Among those investigated, according to officials close to the investigation, was Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller. [1:2-3.]

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, moving to help solve the problems of the ailing Franklin National Bank, assumed responsibility for the bank's contracts to buy and sell foreign currencies. Because of its difficulties, the bank had trouble operating in the foreign-exchange field. Meanwhile, support grew among members of Congress and businessmen for Franklin to remain an independent but smaller banking institution. [1:1.]

New evidence has been obtained that raises serious doubts about the guilt of Rubin (Hurricane) Carter and another man who were sentenced to life imprisonment seven years ago for a triple murder in Paterson, N.J. The two principal prosecution witnesses have recanted their testimony. [1:2-4.]

The Democratic candidate for Governor, Representative Hugh L. Carey, has put together an unusually large and varied Democratic-Liberal coalition that includes Meade H. Esposito, Brooklyn Democratic leader, and Alex Rose, Liberal party leader. Consequently, he is probably the first Democratic candidate for Governor in 20 years who can count on an enthusiastic and united party behind him as the election approaches. Former Mayor Robert F. Wagner, Mr. Carey's chief adviser, had a key role in forming the coalition, helped form the coalition. [1:2-3.]

Criminal penalties for users of marijuana would be abolished in New Jersey under a report being drafted by the State Attorney General's office. In addition to recommending to Governor Byrne the abolition of penalties, the report proposes the creation of a new state agency that would administer medical and other therapeutic treatment for hard-drug users who would no longer be sent to prison, provided they entered such a program and were not criminally involved in the use of drugs. [4:3:1-2.]

CORRECTION

An article in The New York Times on Tuesday erroneously reported that the State Supreme Court had ruled that Michael Moriarty had no further comment to Rick Hobard, the theatrical producer, after leaving the cast of "Find Your Way Home." Although the court did deny a motion by Mr. Hobard for an injunction to prevent Mr. Moriarty from appearing in another producer's show, Mr. Hobard plans to seek money damages from Mr. Moriarty.
