The Major Events of the Day

International

Peruvian troops and tanks crushed a revolt by policemen demanding wage increases in Lima, the capital. This set off rioting by civilians that led the leftist military Government to declare a national state of emergency under which all constitutional guarantees were suspended. According to unconfirmed reports, policemen in other cities were also on strike. [Page 1, Columns 3-4.]

President Ford in his first round of talks with Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the visiting Prime Minister of Pakistan, promised active consideration to lifting the arms embargo on sales of military equipment. The White House left the impression that it was moving toward modifying the embargo despite Indian pressure to keep it on. [1:4-5.]

President Ford urged Congress to reconsider its cutoff of military aid to Turkey. He said the Congressional action might trigger far-reaching and damaging consequences for Western security in the eastern Mediterranean and was likely to impede the negotiation of a just Cyprus settlement. Turkey's response to the cutoff was to threaten to revise her security arrangements with the United States. Turkey's Foreign Minister, Melih Esenbol, canceled a meeting in Brussels with Secretary of State Kissinger and with Foreign Minister Dimitrios Bletsos of Greece. [1:3:1-6.]

National

The House of Representatives voted 309 to 114 to suspend for 90 days President Ford's power to increase fees on imported oil. It acted despite Mr. Ford's major lobbying effort to persuade members from both parties that he must act immediately to push up the price of petroleum products to force a cut in their use. The measure goes to the Senate where passage is certain but a two-thirds majority to override a veto or silence a filibuster is not. [1:8.]

The Senate voted 76 to 8 to freeze the price of food stamps for the rest of the year. The measure, identical with one passed by the House, is the first to go from the new Congress to the President's desk. A White House aide said the President would "reflect on the vote and the alternatives." The overwhelming vote in both houses indicated that a veto would not stand. [1:6-7.]

Nearly 10,000 members of the United Automobile Workers met in the District of Columbia Army to demand action by the
