

The Major Events of the Day

International

Secretary of State Kissinger warned the third world majority of the United Nations yesterday that its "arbitrary tactics" in the General Assembly were alienating the support of the American people for the organization. He made the statement in a speech at the Institute of World Affairs in Milwaukee. It appeared to be an oblique warning to the third world nations that if they suspend Israel from the General Assembly this fall, as they did South Africa last year, the United States might withhold financial support from the United Nations or withdraw from the session. [Page 1, Column 5.]

Israel's resentment of American pressure for an Israeli pullback in occupied Sinai stoned the United States Embassy in Tel Aviv. The attack followed a demonstration by about 15,000 people organized by the generally pro-American Likud party and other Israeli nationalist groups. [1:6.]

After nearly two years of negotiations, the 35 countries attending the European security conference in Geneva decided on July 30 as the target date for their leaders to meet to sign a charter on relations between the East and West. [1:4.]

Preparations proceeded smoothly at the Kennedy Space Center, at Cape Canaveral, Fla., for the launching today of the Apollo spacecraft and its three astronauts into a nine-day journey into space and a link-up with the Soviet Union's Soyuz spacecraft. The take-off is scheduled at 3:50 P.M., Eastern daylight time. The weather forecast was favorable. [1:2.]

Ready for rendezvous with Apollo, two Soyuz spacecraft, one of them held in reserve, were ready atop their launching rockets for a take-off today at 8:20 A.M., Eastern daylight time, from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Soviet Central Asia, about 1,400 miles southeast of Moscow. Soyuz will be manned by two astronauts. The flight plans call for a link-up with Apollo on Thursday. [1:3.]

National

President Ford announced a plan for the gradual removal of all price controls on domestic oil over a 30-month period. He said that it was a "reasonable compromise" that would stimulate the production of oil in the United States. The Administration estimates that if the plan is accepted by Congress the price of gasoline and fuel oil would be increased by 7 cents a gallon at the end of the 30 months. [1:8.]

Estimates

Democrats in Congress were sharply critical of President Ford's plan to remove price controls on oil and moved ahead with plans to act this week on legislation that will put Congress on a collision course with the President over energy policy. "There is no chance of his selling decontrol," Representative Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the House Democratic leader, said. [1:6-7.]

Clarence M. Kelley, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, acknowledged that after World War II, agents of the F.B.I. had committed break-ins and burglaries not authorized by search warrants to secure "information relative to the security of the nation." His statement provided the first official confirmation of a practice that former F.B.I. officials have alluded to. [1:4.]

Metropolitan

More than 100,000 municipal employees stayed at their jobs until the usual 5 P.M. quitting time after their union leadership agreed not to defy Mayor Beane's order canceling longstanding shortened summer-work schedules, under which the quitting time was an hour earlier. [1:1.]

Mayor Beane was said to be working plans to restore full service on the Staten Island ferry, hoping to get funds from state mass-transit operating subsidies and also possibly a fare increase. Ferry service was curtailed on July 1 as a result of the city's budget crisis. [26:1-2.]

A special court ruled that provisions of New York State's Fair Campaign Code were unconstitutional and said that broad restrictions on election campaigning were "repugnant to the right of freedom of speech." The three-judge court, convened to consider a constitutional challenge by three State Assembly candidates last year, threw out the code's prohibition against attacking any political candidate's race, sex, religion or ethnic background. [1:2-3.]

Investigators who have already found widespread abuses in the nursing-home industry are beginning to find evidence of apparent fraud in some storefront offices, often called "Medicaid Mills," where groups of doctors treat patients whose bills are paid by the Government. [1:1.]
