The Major Events of the Day

International

The Polish Government yesterday withdrew its plan to raise food prices sharply after workers protesting the increases had torn up railroad tracks near Warsaw and struck in other parts of the country. Prime Minister Piotr Jaroszewicz, in a brief television statement, said that the Government had decided to give the proposal further consideration. This could take months. [Page 1, Column 5.]

In an address on the political, economic and military prospects of the West before the Institute of Strategic Studies in London, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was philosophical and optimistic and possibly valedictory. The institute regularly publishes studies on the balance of world forces. Mr. Kissinger's aides, with whom he spent several weeks preparing the speech, said that it might have been his final major address in Europe as Secretary of State. [1:6-7.]

National

The Supreme Court ruled 7 to 2 that private schools may not exclude black children because of their color. The Court in effect ruled against the so-called "freedom schools" that were established in the South by whites following the Court's 1954 Brown decision that banned racial segregation in public schools. The Southern Independent School Association, representing about 375 schools, was one of the parties in the legal dispute that resulted in today's ruling. The association had concluded that many of its member schools excluded students for racial reasons and had argued that the schools could not be forbidden to do so under the Constitution. [1:8.]

In another 7-to-2 decision, the Supreme Court ruled that civil rights laws give the same protection to whites as they do to blacks and made it clear that those laws were not intended only for nonwhites. The ruling was made in a case in which two white men charged that they were illegally discriminated against on the basis of race when their employer dismissed them for allegedly stealing company property, but did not dismiss a third man, a black, who was implicated. [1:6-7.]

With the statement that "I have concluded that his services should be terminated," Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz dismissed Maurice H. Nadler as special state prosecutor in charge of investigating corruption in New York City's criminal-justice system. John F. Keenan, chief assistant district attorney in Manhattan, was named to succeed him. [1:1.]

Bipartisan agreement was announced in Albany on a bill that would allow Family Court judges to mandate confinement of a minimum of two years for juveniles who committed the most serious crimes of violence. The bill has Governor Carey's support and is expected to get quick approval in the Legislature. [1:2.]

President Ford assigned 100 Job Corps trainees to help clean up the beaches on Long Island that were polluted by sewage in the last week, but the beaches were not made eligible for Federal disaster aid. Al Joans Beach State Park is expected to open most of its beaches today. [1:3-4.]

The theft of a $250,000 payroll at the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research on East 68th Street was prevented in an early morning stakeout by detectives who arrested five men. The detectives had followed a tip from an informant a month ago who said that there would be a robbery at an unnamed Manhattan hospital. [1:2-3.]

Quotation of the Day

"We have nothing to fear from competition. If there is a military competition, we have the strength to defend our interests. If there is an economic competition, we won it long ago. If there is an ideological competition, the power of our ideas depends only on our will to uphold them."—Henry A. Kissinger, in what aides described as possibly his last major European address as Secretary of State. [1:6.]

CORRECTION

An item in the People and Business column of June 16 incorrectly attributed to Edwin H. Yeo 3d, Under Secretary of the Treasury for Monetary Affairs, a statement predicting closer management of currency exchange rates. Mr. Yeo says the Treasury remains opposed to any sort of management.
