

Wash Star-News 12/12/72

New Watergate Dimension?

By THOMAS B. ROSS

A fake passport produced by the Central Intelligence Agency for former White House consultant Howard Hunt Jr. was found carried by one of the burglars at the time of the Watergate break-in, according to a report released by the Justice Dept. today. The report, which is part of an investigation by the FBI, said the passport was found on a man who was found in a car in the Democratic National Convention headquarters in Washington on the night of the break-in.

The passport, which is for a man named "John G. ...," was found in a car in the Democratic National Convention headquarters in Washington on the night of the break-in. The passport was found on a man who was found in a car in the Democratic National Convention headquarters in Washington on the night of the break-in.

Hunt's wife was cited in the United Air Lines crash in Chicago on Friday. Her plane was found to have an unexplained hole in the fuselage and the pilot gave the report of the crash as "Good luck, folks. We're in the patrols as usual."

The passport was found on a man who was found in a car in the Democratic National Convention headquarters in Washington on the night of the break-in.

contact in Miami. An ex-Marine, he fought with Fidel Castro in Cuba and was rewarded with the gambling casino concession in Havana after Castro won.

But the tall, thin man had an early falling-out with his wife, who went over to the Cubans for Communist money in Miami. He was once arrested on a boat off British Honduras in what he described as a "scandalous" affair.

A soldier of fortune, he is believed to have used several pseudonyms besides that of Edward Hamilton. He was born Frank Horton in Norfolk, Va., but adopted the name of his stepfather.

Hunt was listed as a White House consultant by Charles F. Baker, special counsel to President Nixon. He openly carried his "Who's Who" list of names associated under a number of pseudonyms — Robert T. ... John Baxter and Brian Davis.

The passport was found in a car in the Democratic National Convention headquarters in Washington on the night of the break-in. The passport was found on a man who was found in a car in the Democratic National Convention headquarters in Washington on the night of the break-in.

Investigators said the fake passport and the possible CIA role in the break-in would probably be explored at the trial scheduled to begin next month.

The CIA is prohibited by law from conducting any operations within the United States and, of course, is proscribed from taking part in domestic politics. It is known, however, to have been involved with the Cuban community and with other anti-Communist exile groups in U.S. cities.

The investigators said they did not have a plausible theory as to why Mrs. Hunt was carrying so much cash.

Defenses Pushes For Subpoena in Watergate Case

The defense in the Watergate bugging and break-in case is pressing its attempt to subpoena from The Los Angeles Times records of an interview with an admitted participant in the incident.

In papers filed yesterday in U.S. District Court here, an attorney for defendant B. Howard Hunt Jr. claims that the newspaper has the only known records of an interview two of its reporters had with Alfred C. Baldwin, an ex-FBI agent who is expected to testify for the government at the trial, and that a recent Supreme Court ruling requiring newsmen to testify before grand juries makes it clear that the newspaper must produce the records.