Haldeman's Role Viewed As Reduced by Watergate

NYTimes

By JOHN HERBERS APR 26 1973

H. R. Haldeman, who once ran -Henry A. Kissinger, George the Nixon White House with P. Shultz, John D. Ehrlichman, stern efficiency, appeared today Roy L. Ash and others to have lost much of his power that their time could be better as reports mounted that a spent in meetings with their shake-up in the staff, including subordinates. resignations, was being planned.

have played a role in the crime. involved. He has hired a lawyer to defend him in the case.

House press secretary, dis-were continuing reports from closed under questioning that White House sources that there the regular morning meetings would be major changes. of top aides that Mr. Haldeman had conducted for more than who regulated the flow of peo-development had been connectwith the Watergate case. Continued on Page 34, Column 4

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 25— | He said that the aides involved

Other sources, Mr. Haldeman has been re-pointed out that the breakoff ported to be under investiga- of what had become an instition by the grand jury looking tution at the White House, into the burglary and bugging with Mr. Haldeman in charge, of Democratic headquarters in coincided with the more recent the Watergate building last explosive developments in the summer and in alleged attempts Watergate case and indicated to protect some who might strongly that Watergate was

There was no clear indication Ronald L. Ziegler, the White might be forthcoming, but there today as to when staff changes

As chief of staff and the man four years were broken off ple and information into the president's office, Mr. Halde-Mr. Ziegler denied that this the second most influential man man had long been considered in the White House.

Haldeman's Role Viewed as Reduced by Watergate

Mr. Haldeman but to Leonard inside, how the lines of author-direction of the President, who has dealt with minority matters and special projects but who was not in the first rank of White House aides.

Role as Counsel Reported

Mr. Garment, according to Mr. Laird said that they believed he could be persuaded to return to Washington for special duty if the President asked him.

Meantime, reports from the White House indicated that the President was spending most of his time on the Watergate case and had become the chief investigator of the case.

Continued From Page 1, Col. 3 turning for advice to some of Mr. Laird was visiting his ill questions as to whether the mother today, he said that he President, by overseeing the White House sources, has been acting as Mr. Nixon's counsel and adviser in the Watergate matter during the last few days. Another aide who has entered the picture as enjoying Mr. Nixon's confidence in the Watergate matter during the last few days is Patrick J. Buchanan, special consultant to the President, who spent a day and a half with Mr. Nixon in Key Biscayne last weekend. Mr. Haldeman, for the first time anyone could remember, did not make the trip.

Mr. Nixon thus seemed to be Staff, In Marshfield, Wis., where

in the White House.

There were other indications that Mr. Haldeman's power was rapidly declining.

President Nixon, in his handling of the Watergate case recently, has been turning not to Mr. Haldeman but to Leonard Mr. Haldeman but to Leonard (Comment special consultant to lifty have been changed Mr.)

Instead in the Watergate supporters who have not been importers who have not h

United Press International Ronald L. Ziegler at news session at White House.