

First House Vote Against The War

Washington

The House went on record for the first time yesterday against continuation of the war in Indochina.

By a vote of 219 to 188, the members of the House reversed their eight-year record of solid support for the administration's policies and went on record in opposition to the war.

The vote was on an amendment by Representative Joseph Addabbo (Dem.-N.Y.) to block a $430 million transfer of funds at the Pentagon to relieve shortages caused by the continuing drain of Cambodia expenditures.

Passage of the Addabbo proposal was followed minutes later by approval, 224 to 172, of another amendment to the $2.8 billion supplemental appropriations bill that was even more specific. It would bar the use of any funds in the measure "to support directly or indirectly combat activities in, over or from off the shores of Cambodia by United States forces."
