Juggling Indictment

Annapolis, Md.

A grand jury indicted one person yesterday for falsifying campaign reports of a fund raising dinner in Maryland last year for Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

Deputy state's attorney Martin A. Wolff did not identify the person named in the four-count indictment, charging violation of state election laws.

The treasurer of the "Salute to Ted Agnew" committee, sponsors of the affair, was Baltimore county businessman B. H. Wharton.

Wolff said the indictment will be served today and then made public.

He said the investigation of the false list of 32 contributors to the gala will continue and that "more indictments against more individuals may be sought."

The probe was initiated last week after state Republican chairman Alexander M. Lankler admitted a bogus report was submitted to the state to make the affair "seem more successful than it really was."

He said the $50,000 was actually a loan from the Committee to Re-Elect the President. The loan surfaced last week in testimony from campaign treasurer Hugh Sloan
