Sam Ervin Is Mighty Amazed

Washington

Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr. (Dem.-N.C.) expressed amusement at the large number of names contained in a White House list of political enemies made public at the Watergate hearings yesterday.

"I can't forebear observing, when I consider the list of opponents, why the Democratic vote was so light in the general election," the Watergate committee chairman said.

As Ervin chuckled, committee vice chairman Howard H. Baker Jr. (Rep.-Tenn.) broke in.

"Mr. Chairman, I really even in my wildest dreams wouldn't think of trying to embellish or improve on your story. But you told it better the first time. You leaned over to me and you said, 'I think I'm going to demand a recount. There are more enemies than we got votes.'"
