

Editor — While Mr. Nixon professes to respect the confidentiality of the relations between "a lawyer and his client, between a priest and a penitent, and between a husband and wife," I find it interesting that he did not mention the relations between a psychiatrist and his patient or a reporter and his news source. I find it difficult to accept his not releasing the tapes for "moral reasons" when he was so blatantly immoral to record them without the knowledge of his associates. These and other examples are a sad testimony to the character of the man we have elected to the Presidency.
