

Well, Now What?

Editor — Contrary to the White House staff, who would have us believe the President deserves a medal for holding a press conference and those poor suckers who send $10 to protect our millionaire President from the laws of the land, I have a few questions.

We have had four explanations of Watergate from Nixon — each one different. He appointed Archibald Cox to "get to the bottom of it," and then said it "should go to the courts." Now they are saying that "the courts have no jurisdiction" over it. Well, which is it?

Also, after the high crimes which occurred, at the very least through his carelessness, Richard Nixon talks of the value of the Presidency and the country (in that order) and speaks (Nixon-like) of those who would prevent him from getting on with leading us.

I think the real question is whether we need Richard Nixon's style of politics anymore. Of all of our citizens, is he really the best among us?
