WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield expressed hope yesterday the Senate Watergate Committee will see its job through to the end and recommend legislation to restore "some of that old-time morality" to politics.

Mansfield noted published reports the Committee had become discouraged in its current study of campaign "dirty tricks" and might cut hearings short before its Nov. 1 deadline for a wind-up.

The television networks agreed to drop gavel to gavel coverage of the hearings after Wednesday's testimony by White House speech writer Patrick J. Buchanan, who Mansfield said was "a very aggressive, competent witness and more than held his own with the Committee."

"But the Committee must continue to fulfill its responsibilities," the Montana Democrat told reporters.
