Agnew Aides Said to Seek Activists' Lawyers' Advice

By JOHN KIFNER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 29 within the legal community over whether the grand jury system is being abused.

In response to these sweeping investigations, defenders of dissenters and advocate of law and order seeking to learn from the defense techniques in two of the Administration's one-time chief attacker of dissenters and advocate of law and order seeking to learn from the defense techniques in two of the Administration's most celebrated unsuccessful prosecutions of antiwar activists.

Mr. Agnew, who had also been a critic of judicial "permissiveness" and suspended sentences, eventually struck a bargain with the Justice Department in which he resigned and pleaded no contest to one count of income tax evasion to stay out of prison.

Asked About Strategy

Jack Levine, a Philadelphia lawyer long associated with radical cases, and Charles Nesson, a Harvard Law School professor who had worked on Dr. Ellsberg's defense, said, however, that earlier Mr Agnew's lawyers had asked them about motions they had made in combating grand jury investigations.

One of Mr. Agnew's attorneys attorneys and suspended sentences, eventually struck a bargain with the Justice Department in which he resigned and pleaded no contest to one count of income tax evasion to stay out of prison.

Asked About Strategy

Jack Levine, a Philadelphia lawyer long associated with radical cases, and Charles Nesson, a Harvard Law School professor who had worked on Dr. Ellsberg's defense, said, however, that earlier Mr Agnew's lawyers had asked them about motions they had made in combating grand jury during the Pentagon approaches a content of the hought their "client didn't accessing to block a Boston grand jury during the Pentagon approaches and the American Civil Liberties Union have formed study groups that active developing legal expertise in defending against grand jury investigations.

Thus, Mr. Agnew's attorneys acked Mr. Levine, who had successfully defended Sister Jogues Thus, Mr. Agnew's attorneys and suspended sentences, eventually struck a bar investigations.

One of Mr. Agnew's attorneys, Martin London of the New York law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, at first denied that anyone had reached the two men for advice. Then he said that telephone calls had been placed to them but asserted that it "had nohing whatever" to do with seeking advice.

"You either believe it or you don't," Mr. London said.

The Nixon Administration has begun a long series of grand jury investigations of radical groups, primarily through the Justice Department's Internal Security Division. These inquiries have created debate that the had sent them the briefs.

Sent Bill for $50

Mr. Levine said that after he had given the advice, "I got mad thinking about all my friends they [the Administration] sent to jail."

So, he said, he sent in a bill for $50, with a notation that he intended to donate the fee to a friend seeking the impeachment of Mr. Nixon. He said the bill had not yet been paid.

Mr. Nesson also said he had given the advice, "I got mad thinking about all my friends they [the Administration] sent to jail."

So, he said, he sent in a bill for $50.

Mr. Levine said that after he had given the advice, "I got mad thinking about all my friends they [the Administration] sent to jail."

No, he said, he sent in a bill for $50.

Mr. Nesson also said he had been preachment of Mr. Nixon. He said the bill had not yet been paid.

Mr. Nesson also said he had been preachment of Mr. Nixon. He said the bill had not yet been paid.

Mr. Nesson also said he had been preachment of Mr. Nixon also said the been reached by lawyers for E. Howard Hunt Jr., a convicted Watergate conspirator about motions filed during the Ellsberg case regarding charges of prosecutorial misconduct.