G.O.P. Congressmen to Get Nixon's Views Personally

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11 — President Nixon plans to meet this week with all 234 Republicans in Congress and answer all their questions on Watergate and related matters.

A spokesman for the President acknowledged that a series of six meetings on Watergate was scheduled in the White House after Senator Charles H. Percy, Republican of Illinois, disclosed the President's plans today. Mr. Percy said "I think this will be the beginning of full and total disclosure on the part of Mr. Nixon."

The spokesman said there was no plan now for similar meetings with Democrats, even though Senator Percy said he understood Mr. Nixon would meet with "every member of Congress, Democrat and Republican."

The meetings are part of a White House promise to make more information on Watergate available to the public, Congress and the courts in an effort to stem a rising tide of demands for the President's resignation and a steady decline in Mr. Nixon's standing in public opinion polls.

White House officials have confirmed that they did not expect the amount of adverse public reaction that followed the dismissal of the special Watergate prosecutor, Archibald Cox, and the disclosure that two of the Watergate tape recordings sought by the courts did not exist.

The latest poll, disclosed today, showed that less than half the people, 49 per cent, wanted Mr. Nixon to continue in office. The poll, based on telephone interviews with 778 adults last week, was conducted by Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., for Time magazine. A similar poll conducted in August showed that 60 per cent of those polled wanted to see Mr. Nixon continue as President.

Further, the recent poll showed that 56 per cent believed Mr. Nixon had violated his promise to the people to "get to the bottom" of the Watergate affair. Only 32 per cent said they believed he had kept his promise. And 55 per cent said they believed he was not telling the truth about the nonrecording of the tapes and was trying to cover up what they considered his involvement.

Faced by this kind of evidence of public mistrust, Mr. Nixon and his assistants have begun to put together over the last few days a comprehensive campaign for him to both answer his critics and make information available from the White House files to clear him.

Republican leaders in Congress, meeting with the President Friday, were told he would try to make information from the Watergate tapes available to the public after they had gone to the grand jury. There was little indication so far, however, to show that documentation or detail would be made public from White House papers and tapes.

Senator Percy, appearing on the National Broadcasting Company's "Meet the Press" television show, said that to restore public confidence Mr. Nixon would have to make "total and complete disclosure, everything relating to the possibility of criminal activity."

"I think the President is preparing to do this now," he said. "I think he is moving in this direction. The very fact that we have now been invited, every member of Congress, every Senator, every Congressman, Democrat and Republican, to meet with the President next week in six unusual sessions where at least nine hours will be spent by the President being interrogated by the Congress explaining his position, I think this will be the beginning of full and total disclosure."

The White House, however, seemed to be caught by surprise by the Senator's disclosure. A spokesman said the planning for the meeting had not been completed but it was the President's intention to meet with Representatives at three breakfast sessions and with Senators at smaller gatherings, probably in the White House library or other rooms less formal than Mr. Nixon's oval office.
