House, Nixon Lawyers Meet on Data

By Richard L. Lyons Washington Post Staff Writer

Lawvers for the House Judiciary Committee and Presi- base for White House refusal dent Nixon have held what to turn over voluntarily much House documents be limited based," he said. was called a friendly but inconclusive first meeting on feels it needs was not clear. Rep. Edward Hutchinson (Rprocedures for White House information the committee needs for its presi-positive than negative. dential impeachment inquiry.

John Doar, the committee's special counsel, said neither he nor James D. St. Clair, head of the President's legal team, had, authority to make any specific commitments at Monday meeting in Doar's office at the Capitol.

Doar said the meeting "went very well," but added that "the one thing Mr. St. Clair made clear was that he wanted to know what procedures the committee would have" for preserving the confidentiality of information that the White House might turn over to the committee.

Doar and Albert Jenner, counsel for committee Repubsicans, briefed the committee to investigate." in closed session on their meeting with St. Clair and then discussed it with news-curity information.

Whether this was laying the this first exchange was more

Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino (D-N.J.) said "there inquiry and make the rest was an offer to cooperate" on available to the full committee St. Clair's part. In any case, $\big|$ and ultimately to the public if the House has armed the committee with broad power to ob- impeachment. tain any information it feels necessary by subpoena if it is not turned over voluntarily.

Jenner called the meeting able to committee members, as has been done in the past, by permitting them to examine it alone in a secure room without making copies or taking notes.

The issue of confidentiality could cause problems with sideration of confidentiality" on St. Clair's part and the "pervasive and overriding re-

Doar said St. Clair was concerned about publicity that might prejudice fair trials in upcoming Watergate cases, said. "We will say we have that is a factor in making move forward."

One procedure mentioned information the committee to Doar, Jenner, Rodino and feels it needs was not clear. Rep. Edward Hutchinson (Rodino and generally what sort of information—wast committee members felt Mich.) senior Republican on obtaining Most committee members felt Mich.), senior Republican on the committee. They could screen out what what was considered not necessary to the the committee recommends

> Information which the necessary by subpoena if it is four felt should not be made could cause problems with junior committee members sponsibility of the committee to investigate."

Rodino said the committee will attempt by the end of next week to adopt rules for examining White House documents. "We are not going to whether the president should be impeached for Watergate or other actions.

Rodino stated or better the committee members who may demand first-hand access to all information that bears on the question of whether the President should be impeached for Watergate or other actions.

and disclosure of national se-done this and are ready to their decision on impeachment.

> "The public will know on was that first access to White what the judgment was > > mation—"documents, logs and tapes"—the committee will need, but made no specific request for them.