No Evidence Of Tax Fraud

By John P. MacKenzie Washington Post Staff Writer

"more taxes."

with the Executives' Club of 1969 document. Chicago, Mr. Nixon called his In his Chicago appearance disputed $576,000 tax deduc- yesterday, Mr. Nixon said the tion for donation of vice presi- technical question was dential papers a "debatable, "whether a gift of three-quartechnical point" -rather than ters of a million dollars worth any fraud.

sell B. Long (D-La.), chairman months before the deadline of the Joint Committee on In-whether the paperwork on it was completed in time to qual-Sen. Wallace Bennett of Utah, its ranking Republican, were correct in saying "there's been deduction. If it was not compart of the President."

mr. Nixon omitted any reference to the committee's vice chairman, Rep. Wilbur Dr. Mills (D-Ark), who, although not charging fraud, has predicted that the committee's report would hurt the President more than Watergate.

Another committee member, Rep. James A. Burke (D-Mass.), supported Mills The Boston Globe quoted Burke as saying the committee's report, when made public in about three weeks, will be "a shocker, and there'll be nothing cheap about this." Nixon addes called Mills prediction a "cheap shot."

Mr. Nixon never signed the deed; but former white House deputy counsel Edward L. Morgan has said he signed such a document in 1969 think ing, perhaps mistakenly, that he had authority to do so for the President.

Mr. Nixon's accountant, Arthur Blech of Los Angeles, said yesterday that a special of public papers.

Aides claimed the 1969 deed existed after it was discovered that the deed in the National Archives could not have been prepared in April, 1969 because it was typed on a machine Mr.

President Nixon said yester- Nixon's tax lawyers obtained day that congressional investi- in July, 1969. The aides have gators have found no evidence told the investigtors, including he committed tax fraud al- Internal Revenue Service agents though he may wind up owing and committee staff, that the 1970 document was not a fake In his televised meeting but a retyping of the missing of presidential papers The President said Sen. Rus- which was delivered three ify for the deduction."

"If it was completed in time.

as I understand it, I get the deduction; I pay the tax and shocker, and there'll be nothing cheap about this." Nizon aftes called Mills' prediction a "cheap shot."

Mr. Nizon's accountant, Arthur Blech of Los Angeles, and yesterday that a special agent of the IRS Intelligence Division—the only agents with authority to check for criminal fraud—had entered the pute is still missing and that the White House has old the month.

pute is still missing and that the White House hast old the committee it is "lost."

The document is a deed two-day session with the committee which Mr. Nixon's tax aides have said would prove that the necessary paperwork for the donation had been completed in the spring of 1969.

deductions for such gifts. He said he was confident that no impropriety would be found on Mr. Nixon's part.

Asked whether he was equally confident that he was not a target of the probe, the ac-countant replied, "Absolutely.

Blech acknowledged that Blech acknowledged that the special agent, accompanied by a regular IRS agent, had read him a warning about his constitutional rights, but added, "They asked me if I would mind discussing a certain subject. They said would I mind if it was under certain I mind if it was under oath. I said I would insist upon it and I wanted a transcript. That is not the way they talk to prospective targets"

Blech said he expected another visit from IRS agents later this month