Attorney General William a kind of steady re-evaluation B. Saxbe, criticized for his outspoken comments to newsmen, is considering a different and is cheduled so far this week. Hushen assured reporters, perhaps less frequent forum to meet the press.

John W. Hushen, the Justice Department's director of public information, said in response to questions vesterday. sponse to questions yesterday that some department officials have urged Saxbe to discontinue his usual weekly meetings with reporters over coffee and doughnuts.

It has been at those sesions that Saxbe has delivered his most widely criticized statements, including the comment last week that he considers Patricia Hearst one of a group of "common criminals."
