Documents outlining the reasons for a request April 19 by the House Judiciary Committee for White House tape recordings and files bearing on an increase in milk price supports and the settlement of antitrust action against the International Telephone and Telegraph Company were not sent to the White House, as reported yesterday in The New York Times. The documents were distributed to members of the Judiciary Committee, along with copies of letters to the White House asking for the tapes and files.

A headline printed yesterday on one of the pages carrying the White House tape transcripts stated erroneously that President Nixon had described Herbert L. Porter as "a little fish that got caught in the net." The characterization was made by John D. Ehrlichman. Another heading, on the first of the tape transcripts—a conversation between the President and Mr. Ehrlichman on April 15, 1973—erroneously gave the time of the meeting as 10:35-11:15 P.M. It was 10:35-11:15 A.M.
