

Jackson Scores Nixon, Sees Delaying Tactics

MIAMI BEACH, May 28 (UPI)—Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) accused President Nixon today of using delaying tactics in the Watergate investigation and said he was afraid the congressional session would be over before an impeachment trial could be heard in the Senate.

Jackson, in a news conference and a speech before the Textile Workers Union of America, AFL-CIO, also attacked the administration's economic policies and proposed a formula for a U.S.-Soviet disarmament treaty.

"It is clear that the (Watergate) strategy of the White House is to seek delays and I have a serious question whether this case can be adjudicated in this session," Jackson told newsmen.

He said when the session ends, "all bills of this Congress die, including a possible bill of impeachment."

On detente with the Soviet Union, Jackson said he is proposing a plan "that will test uncertain Soviet intentions by inviting them to join with us in concluding a far-reaching agreement to bring about a measure of stability in the nuclear balance at sharply reduced levels of strategic forces.

"Instead of arms limitations agreements that do not limit, it is time for serious arms reductions by both sides—a stabilizing disarmament," Jackson said.

He said the Soviet Union and the United States should be limited to 800 intercontinental ballistic missiles each, and no more than the equivalent of 35 missile-firing submarines of the Poseidon type.
