

ABC News
transcribed
from tape

26 Jun 74

The White House says President Nixon still has some swelling in his left leg caused by a case of phlebitis. White House officials say the President experiences no pain from the swelling, unless he stands for a long period of time.

This noon the President walked half a mile in Bursseles, travelling from the U.S. Embassy to a luncheon date with King Baudoin.

[Complete.]