WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP) — Charles W. Colson, the former White House aide who pleaded guilty to obstructing justice in disseminating derogatory material about Daniel Ellsberg, was disbarred Tuesday by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

The order, signed by three judges of the court, prohibits Mr. Colson "from holding himself out to be an attorney at law" licensed to practice before the local District Court.

Such notices are routinely forwarded to other jurisdictions where a lawyer is admitted to the bar and usually result in total disbarment. Mr. Colson has also been licensed to practice in Virginia and Massachusetts.
