

JUN 27 1974

Calley Enters Military Prison

William L. Calley Jr., the only soldier to be convicted for the My Lai massacre, entered a military prison yesterday for the first time. It did not appear that he would be there long.

The former Army lieutenant went to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to resume serving a 10-year sentence for murder. But he has appealed the verdict on the ground that the military court had been improperly influenced by President Nixon and Pentagon leaders and that he had been inadequately trained to disobey an illegal order by superiors.

Mr. Calley began his term in bachelor quarters at Fort Benning, Ga., and was freed on bail pending an appeal to a Federal Court. Ordered returned to confinement, he will be eligible for parole in a matter of months, according to lawyers, even if his appeal fails.

A court near the fashionable ski resort of Gstaad, Switzerland, awarded Elizabeth Taylor a divorce yesterday from Richard Burton.

The grounds were incompatibility, and both parties renounced their rights of appeal. Miss Taylor attended the 15-minute hearing but did not testify. Mr. Burton was in seclusion in New York.

Lawyers said an amicable settlement had been reached last May. Miss Taylor was reported to have received custody of their adopted daughter, Maria, and rights to all her property, including the couple's yacht and her jewelry.

JUN 27 1974

Mrs. Egil Krogh Jr. says she and her husband never thought it was wrong to lie about the burglary of the White House plumbers until Judge Gerhard Gesell thundered his indignation.

Writing in McCall's magazine, Mrs. Krogh said her husband had assumed President Nixon had known about the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's former psychiatrist and had been persuaded by G. Gordon Liddy and E. Howard Hunt that it was routine Central Intelligence Agency procedure.

Mr. Krogh's argument that a White House order of secrecy had obliged him to lie about the burglary aroused Judge Gesell's ire. Convicted for his role, he was freed last Friday after 4½ months in prison.

"Bud's willingness to go to prison wasn't based on feelings of guilt," his wife wrote, "but rather on the idea that 'for reasons of national security' is not a valid excuse for a man's actions if it denies others their individual freedom."

She quoted her husband as having said: "A country that fress Ellsberg and puts me on trial instead can't be all bad—right?"

Associated Press

William L. Calley Jr., right, being taken from the stockade at Fort Benning, Ga., by Maj. Frank Willey for trip to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., yesterday.

... Robert M. Hutchins has retired as chairman of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. He will be succeeded by Mortimer J. Adler.

A teacher dismissed for refusing to wear a necktie has filed a $250,000 damage suit against Mount Carmel High School, a Roman Catholic institution in Chicago.

Daniel R. Murphy, who taught business, sociology and swimming, said he hadn't worn a tie in years, and really was dismissed because he had advocated "equal rights for women and blacks."