

Despair

Editor — It may appear to be so, but people don't really "hate" President Nixon. It's just that they're bursting their bonds of futility. It's that hopeless feeling of despair that irks them.

What appears to be hate for Nixon is blind hate for a system so rigid and so unresponsive to 75 per cent of the people. There's no quick way to replace a discredited leader, such as provided in the Motherland, where, ironically, democracy reigns over, under and around a monarchial system.

STUART OLIVER.

Oakland.