"I'm just an old retired fellow, I want to be left alone," said E. Howard Hunt, a convicted Watergate burglar, as he took possession of his new and luxurious home with swimming pool near Biscayne Bay in Florida. The purchase price of the one-story, four-bedroom house was not disclosed, but it's assessed for tax purposes at $80,000, and assessed valuations normally run considerably lower than true market value. Mr. Hunt served 10 months of a 2½-to-8-year sentence after pleading guilty in the Watergate burglary. He is now appealing the conviction.
