Morton Predicts Little Difference Between Ford and Nixon Policies

President Ford probably will put new emphasis on tharea of our 'people administration' trations', to perfect the delivpolicies in energy, resources erysystems," Morton said, reference to the transfer and will put new emphasis on and environment, but not alter their basic intent, says hisold friend,Interior SecretaryRogersC.B. Morton.

"I don't think there's going to be a redirection," Morton Morton saidin an interview Friday before the new President was sworn in. "It won't be policy differences but it will matter of degree and of emphasis."

"We do have a problemhat has to be solved, and aminerals policythathas to be honed down and sharpened.

"Wedo have a water-for-energy problem.

"We do have a problem in erring to the trusteeship and would be very interested in services provided through his environmental protection as department's Bureau of Indian Affairs and Office of Territo-"Certainlythewhole area of energy research was em-bryoed in the Nixon adminis- ment than Mr. Nixon. tration, and I think that is going to be pushed forward because there is a realneed for Morton said he did not expectany contrast betweenMr. Ford's views on these issues and those of former President Nixon.

"Ithink you could very easily get confused between Nixon policy and Ford policy, when onereally is a more emphaticextension of the other," he said.

Morton said President Ford energy and mineral resources are developed, and might take a more personal interest in outdoor recreation develop-

In a speech last March, Mr. Ford said he "would couple ProjectIndependence (the energy program) iwth anew idea called 'Project Protection' an action plan that takes into account the impact of increased domestic energy and agriculture production on naturalresourcesand land use.