Before House Panel Ford's Appearance May Be Postponed

By Richard L. Lyons and George LardnerJr. Washington Post Staff Writers

President Ford's scheduled bers, all lawyers, should be testimony before a House sub- able to phrase their questions committee Thursday probably will be postponed unless, as now seems unlikely, a jury for the Watergate cover-up trial tor Leon Jaworski talked with has been selected and locked Hungate last week and asked

The reason: if prospevtive jurors watched on television or read Mr. Ford's testimony shout factor and discontinuous selection has not been selected.

Hungate can simply wait until Wednesday and then postpone the hearing if the jury selection has not been selected. about facts underlying his pardon of former President Nixon fair trial of such defendants as chances were good that a jury H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, who was described as Mr. Nixon's end of this week. But one lawalter ego during their White ing of his panel yesterday to discuss this situation, but no final decision was reached.

It was learned, however, that while most members favored a one-week postponement if the jury has not been sequestered, Rep. Wiley Mayne (R-Iowa) strongly opposed any postponement. Apparently unwilling to show a sequestion was reached.

day with Siric sions until 6:30 until a jury hand locked up. parently unwilling to show a subcommittee split, Hungate said afterward that while the question of a postponement had been discussed, the hear-ing "is still on" for Thursday.

Mayne told reporters he felt the American people were entitled to as much information as possible about the pardon as speedily as they can get it. He said subcommittee memin a manner that would not prejudice anyone's right to a for a postponement if a jury has not been selected.

selection has not been com-

District Court Judge John J. for any crimes he may have Sirica, who will preside at the committed as President, this could prejudice the right to a yer involved in the case was House days.

Rep. William L. Hungate (D-Mo.), before whose Judiciary subcommittee Mr. Ford has offered to testify, called a meet-but expressed satisfaction with the closed door execution. with the closed door questioning. The trial passed its fifth day with Sirica holding sessions until 6:30 p.m. each day until a jury has been chosen

