House Unit Clears Bill for Access To Nixon Papers

By Richard L. Lyons Washington Post Staff Writer

terday approved a bill similar to one passed by the Senate to protect and assure public access to Richard M. Nixon's presidential tapes and papers.

a section creating a commission to make recommendations by March 31, 1975, for permanent public policy on the question of who owns the official records of Presidents and other federal officials. It has been traditional for Presidents has been traditional for Presidents to take their papers with them when they leave with them when they leave office, but there is no law or court decision on the subject. The Nixon bill passed the Senate six weeks ago, in response to a Nixon agreement with the government that would have given him control of his records and raised the possibility that tapes and other materials detailing his role in Watergate might be derole in Watergate might be destroyed.

stroyed.

The agreement provided that the tapes be preserved for at least five years unless Mr. Nixon died sooner, in which case they would be destroyed. The agreement has not been put into effect. A suit by Mr. Nixon to put it into effect immediately has been heard in U.S. District Court here and may be decided soon. cided soon.

The Brademas Bill, which is to go to the full House Administration Committee Thursday and may reach the House floor early in December, di-rects the General Services Ad-ministration to keep posses-ion of all the Nivertonses sion of all the Nixon tapes and papers and forbids destruction of any of them without con-gressional approval.

The measure does not decide ownership, postponing that decision until the com-

A House subcommittee yes-rday approved a bill similar one passed by the Senate to courts should rule that Mr. Nixon is the lawful owner, the cess to Richard M. Nixon's government would pay him presidential tapes and papers.

The panel headed by Rep.

John Brademas (D-Ind.) added a section greating a section great gr power of eminent domain.

The bill assures access to all the Nixon records by the Watergate special prosecutor and other government agencies. It also directs the GSA to draw up regulations, which could be vetoed by either House, providing public access to Mr. Nixon's Watergate materials and other materials terials and other materials that are of "general historical significance."