A bill limiting the Secret Service to providing full-time security at only one residence of a President or Vice President was approved on a voice vote yesterday by the House Judiciary Committee. Brooks said he expects the House to act on the bill next week and hopes the Senate also will take it up before the current Congress ends so it can go into effect this year. President Ford has not yet designated a private residence to be used as a vacation home, but is expected to spend time during the winter at the family ski retreat in Colorado.

The bill would also limit government expenditures at such residences to items requested in writing by the director of the Secret Service. It is an outgrowth of disclosures that the government spent substantial sums for such things as a swimming pool, shuffleboard, heating system and landscape maintenance at two private homes maintained by former President Nixon.

Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.), author of the bill and chairman of a subcommittee that investigated federal spending on the Nixon properties, said the expenditures, including salaries of all federal personnel assigned to the properties, totaled $17 million.

Brooks' bill provides that if a President or Vice President uses additional private residences, the Secret Service can spend no more than $10,000 for protection at each one.

It further provides that when the period for protection ends, the owner of the property reimburse the government for any increase in market value resulting from the government installations.

In addition, the government would be required to remove its installations at the end of the protective period and restore the property to its origi-
