

Notes on People

Hunt Is Ordered Back to Prison

"I wish I had never heard of the White House," E. Howard Hunt Jr. said yesterday after a Federal judge ordered him back to prison April 25 to complete his sentence for his role in the Watergate burglary. The former operative of the Central Intelligence Agency had served 11 months when he was freed in January last year, while appealing his sentence of 2½ to 8 years. But the United States Court of Appeals in Washington turned him down on Feb. 25.

"I'm pretty close to bankruptcy," Mr. Hunt said when asked why he did not appeal to the Supreme Court. "I watched the action the Supreme Court took on the pleas of [G. Gordon] Liddy and [James W.] McCord, and the climate is not a receptive one." Mr. Hunt has been living in Miami with his 11-year-old son, the youngest of his four children, and will report to the Federal prison camp at Elgin Air Force Base in Florida. Asked whether he would write there, he said it might be against the rules.

"That's a prison," Mr. Hunt said bitterly. "It's not a place like Fort Holabird, [Md.] where John Dean spent his time."

Representative Robert Krueger, a Texas Democrat, nosed out Representative James H. Scheuer, Democrat of Brooklyn-Queens, as the biggest spender in the 1974 Congressional elections, according to a study released Thursday by Common Cause,

Associated Press

ORDERED TO PRISON: E. Howard Hunt Jr., the convicted Watergate conspirator, picking up his suitcase outside District Court in Washington. After serving 11 months of a 2½-to-8-year sentence, he had been free during his appeal.

David Rockefeller at a luncheon.

In Paris, Josephine Baker, 69, was hospitalized Thursday with what her physicians called an "apparent" cerebral hemorrhage. The American-born Miss Baker, who has suffered mild heart attacks previously, had recently opened a revue at the Bobino Music Hall that recalls her 50 years in show business.

Jill Wine Volner, the assistant Watergate special prosecutor who called comments about her miniskirts "irrelevant," quit her job with the Department of Justice Wednesday and is making lecture appearances.

In Philadelphia, at Temple University's "Women's Week," the 30-year-old lawyer said she never was assigned a case for a year after she joined the department in 1969. "They had this stereotype of a prosecutor who was an ex-Marine, smoked cigars and intimidated witnesses," she said.

In Moscow, at a 90-minute conference, Sargent Shriver ended a 19-day tour of the Soviet Union with his wife, Eunice, three of their children and a nephew, John F. Kennedy Jr. They will go on to Paris and Rome.