

Editor — Will the Nixon haters ever tire of spewing out their pernicious bile against the man history will ultimately rank as one of our greatest Presidents?

John M. Eshleman in his letter of June 25 compares the misuse of taxpayers' money by Representative Hays to the "greatest criminal ever to hold high office in this country." Eshleman is taking unwarranted liberties with words when he uses the word "criminal." Richard M. Nixon has never been convicted of any crime, nor has he ever been arraigned or indicted for a crime.

In the distant future, the occurrences of the past seven years will be evaluated and judged by sagacious historians and placed in their proper perspective. Signal achievements that will be remembered are the halting of the Vietnam war, the opening of negotiations with Communist China, the relaxation of tension between the United States and Russia, the brilliant handling of the volatile Middle East situation, the cessation of senseless riots and unrest on college campuses, reversing the extremely dangerous left wing slant of the Supreme Court by appointment of responsible conservatives to the high bench, and curtailing the deplorable socialistic and opprobrious "Great Society" programs.
