Mrs. Kennedy Gives Publishers Notice of Court Move on Book

By JOHN CORRY

Row and Look magazine in an Manchester had made some reapparent effort to stop the visions in the book about Presipublication of a book she once dent Kennedy's assassination. of personal accuracy."

Manchester, who returned here changes." from Europe yesterday. He said that he was "puzzled by the chester to write the story of disturbance" and that he had the assassination "to prevent had "advice not to speak to anyone."

The summons, according to Harper & Row, is simply a notice that Mrs. Kennedy will Mr. Manchester's use of some of pursue court action. It carries her personal recollections. no legal attachment and does not show what course Mrs. Kennedy will follow.

Mr. Manchester, who arrived

Mrs. John F. Kennedy has A friend of his said later that served a summons on Harper & at Mrs. Kennedy's request Mr. wanted written "in the interest But the friend said no one in the Kennedy family had been The book, "Death of a Presi-shown the revised book "for dent," was written by William fear they will want more

Mrs. Kennedy chose Mr. Man-

Continued on Page 42, Column 6

Senator Robert F. Kennedy, the President's brother, has told Harper & Row that he would

Mr. Manchester, who arrived on the Queen Mary, said he was "out of the picture" and "not informed on what was happening."

Harper & Row that he would not seek to prevent publication of "Death of a President" although he is known to be unhappy with it.

A source close to the New York Democrat said that the original manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President Johnson and that Mr. Kennedy and his associates believed this could hurt the Senator's political manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President could hurt the Senator's political manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President could hurt the Senator's political manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President could hurt the Senator's political manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedy and his associates believed this could hurt the Senator's political manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President years and the would not seek to prevent publication of "Death of a President" although he is known to be unhappy with it.

A source close to the New York Democrat said that the original manuscript had reflected the distaste some of the Kennedys felt for President" and the would not seek to prevent publication of "Death of a President" although he is known to be unhappy with it.

Sorensen Advice

The source also said that, be-cause the book might be re-garded as the official Kennedy family version of the assassina-tion, it could create insurmount-able tension between the

Johnson and Kennedy political alliances.

Mr. Manchester, he said, had reported conversations that the Kennedys had regarded as private.

"The Kennedys fear," he said,
"that the book will be so antiJohnson as to be damaging to

He said Theodore C. Sorensen, who was once a special counsel to President Kennedy, had suggested to Senator Kennedy that he pursue legal action. Another associate, he said, suggested to Senator Kennedy suggested to Senator Kennedy that he rebut Mr. Manchester in a magazine article.

Mrs. Kennedy is said to regret having made a confidant of Mr. Manchester. Mr. Manchester, in turn, was described by a friend as "bewildered and caught in the middle of an unpleasant situation."

Last February Mr. Man-

Last February Mr. Manchester told a friend that writing the book had been "sheer agony" because he had been forced to relive the time of the assassination. He said he had regarded the book as a "special trust."

Harper & Row had scheduled publication of "Death of a President" in March but announced over the weekend that it was delaying it until April because of revisions by the author.

Cass Canfield, chairman of the board of Harper & Row, said he was "deeply distressed over the fact that Mrs. Kennedy is unset because I have nedy is upset, because I have great respect and admiration for her."

for her."

Earlier, when asked if the Kennedy family had sought changes in the book because of Mrs. Kennedy's feelings, Evan Thomas, vice president of Harper & Row, said:

"It is impossible to say as to their motives."

If "Death of a President is published, it is virtually certain to be a best seller.

Look magazine is said to have

Johnson and that Mr. Kennedy and his associates believed this could hurt the Senator's political career.

The unedited version of the book, he said, depicted Mr. Johnson as boorish. He said that, in describing the air trip from Dallas to Washington after the assassination Mr. Manchester had indicated that Mr. Johnson had not shown respect for Mrs. Kennedy's feelings. Look magazine is said to have paid more than $650,000 for the